

OYO State Government Reaffirms Commitment to Modern Oyo State at Iwo Road Bus Terminal Commissioning

Governor of Oyo State, His Excellency, Engr. Seyi Makinde, has reaffirmed his administration's commitment to building a modern Oyo State through strategic reforms and infrastructural development.

Speaking during the commissioning of the Iwo Road Bus Terminal in Ibadan, the governor described the project as another promise fulfilled to the people of Oyo State.

“We’re engineering a modern Oyo State, one project, one reform, and one vision at a time,” Governor Makinde said. “This is proof that promises made indeed become promises kept. Through these reforms, we are restoring dignity to movement, beauty to the city of Ibadan, and real hope to the people of Oyo State.”

He also addressed ongoing conversations around the Rashidi Ladoja Circular Road, describing it as an economic backbone to ensure that as Ibadan grows, development happens in an organized and sustainable way.

Governor Makinde expressed appreciation to former President Olusegun Obasanjo, who attended the event as Special Guest of Honour, commending his belief in infrastructure as a driver of national progress.

“We are deeply honoured by Baba’s presence today. His lifelong advocacy for infrastructure has inspired many of us. This is not just a commissioning, but history in progress,” Makinde said.

In his goodwill message, former President Olusegun Obasanjo praised Governor Makinde for making Ibadan more livable and urged him to continue his developmental efforts.

“Governor Makinde is doing well. He is making Ibadan livable and ensuring everyone residing here is comfortable,” Obasanjo stated.

The Iwo Road Bus Terminal forms part of the Oyo State Government's integrated transport system aimed at improving mobility, easing congestion, and promoting sustainable urban growth.
